AG Bruning: Chase County Man Arrested on Four Counts of Distribution of Child Pornography

Multiple images of children believed to be as young as three-years-old engaged in sexual contact with adults

LINCOLN – Attorney General Jon Bruning today announced the arrest of Andrew H. Wennberg, 58, of Imperial on four counts of distribution of child pornography, each a Class ID felony.

Investigators from the Attorney General's Office Rural Cybercrime Unit (RCU) arrested Wennberg today in Imperial with the assistance of the Imperial Police Department. Today's arrest stemmed from a two-month RCU investigation into Wennberg's sharing of online child pornography. The youngest child depicted appeared to be approximately three-years-old.

"These images graphically displayed the victimization of very young children," said Bruning. "These crimes are both deplorable and heartbreaking."

Bruning continued, "We will continue to be vigilant in our fight to protect these children from being revictimized."

A Class ID felony carries a maximum of 50 years in prison and a mandatory minimum of three years.

Wennberg is being held at the Chase County jail. Additional charges may be forthcoming as the search of his computers and external hard drives continues.
